At a meeting of the Anderson Bar A sociation, held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the courthouse, a roster of cases was arranged for the apring term of the court of common pleas, convening here Monday March

s, with Judge Frank B, Gary, of the eighth circuit, presiding. At any rate, the jury com-missioners will draw jurors for the second week. Those for the first veek of court were drawn some days

Probably the most interesting cases set for trial at the approaching term of court are those which Judge J. S. Fowler has brought against a num-ber of insurance companies which carried insurance on his large garage on West Market street, which was destroyed by fire several months ago. As will be recalled, the arbitration committee appointed to agree upon the amount of the loss could never reach a settlement. Judge Fowler then brought suit against the several companies which carried insurance on
